Endless Love

Alex Pettyfer and Gabriella Wilde fall in love in Endless Love

Endless Love was a book by Scott Spencer that was turned into a 1981 movie starring Brooke Shields—your parents will probably remember it. This new movie is loosely based on the earlier movie, rather than the book. Set in Georgia, it's a fresh twist on the original story.

When David, a young working class guy, meets Jade, a privileged young girl who's lived a protected life, she falls in love with his carefree ways while he falls in love with her innocence. Their love becomes obsessive and they try to spend as much time together as possible.

Jade's wealthy father is suspicious of his daughter's new suitor, and less than impressed by his working class background. He decides to investigate David's past—and what he finds is enough to make any dad upset. Let's just say things heat up in a big way—during the climax of the movie, Jade's house catches fire and David's life is put in danger.

Smokin' hot actors Alex Pettyfer and Gabriella Wilde heat up the screen

You probably already know Alex Pettyfer, who plays David. Born in England, he began his career as a child model, but you probably first noticed him when he was chosen to star as a teen spy in the 2006 action adventure Alex Rider: Stormbreaker.

His hot factor went off the charts a few years later when he moved to the States and adopted an American accent to star as a hunky teenage alien in the major Hollywood release I Am Number Four.

Next he played a handsome high school jerk who gets turned into a monster in Beastly, opposite High School Musical's Vanessa Hudgens.

Audiences got a much better look at Alex (wearing nothing but a thong) when he starred opposite Channing Tatum in Magic Mike as a young man who becomes a male stripper to make some cash.

In Endless Love, he takes on the romantic lead opposite fellow Brit Gabriella Wilde. Wilde is her stage name—Gabriella's full name is quite a mouthful—Gabriella Zanna Vanessa Anstruther-Gough-Calthorpe. Her beginnings were also as a model, but she broke into Hollywood movies with a role in the 2010 movie The Three Musketeers opposite Logan Lerman.

Her family is aristocratic—she's a descendant of earls and baronets. Gabriella may have picked the last name Wilde to describe herself—she was once suspended from a prestigious boarding school when she tried to smuggle in vodka.

Although Gabriella dropped out of school to focus on modeling when she was 17, she soon got bored and went back to school to study to be a painter, but when she was asked to audition for a movie, Gabriella enjoyed it so much that she realized she'd found her calling.

Check out Endless Love on February 14—aka Valentine's Day—a perfect release date for a romantic drama.

Make a difference with the new Revolution website

by MARRISKA FERNANDES

He talked to Tribute about the new Revolution website, saying: "It shows people what's happening on the planet; what can be done about it and tells them who's already doing something and how."

He revealed that everyone can help. "If you're wondering, 'What can I do about the issues threatening the planet?' This website is what you can do. Pick an issue that's important to you—you can change the world in the way you want to change it.

"Whatever topic you feel is of the most importance, such as ocean acidification, climate change, deforestation, overfishing, then get involved with that. Choose whatever you feel most strongly about."

The Change the World tab helps you create petitions, become ambassadors and/or activists and shows you many more ways to support the planet. According to Rob, the new website will also "connect people with the organizations that are doing things about this."

There are also study guides for teachers, hours of videos, cool pics and tons of info on how you can make a difference. Check out the website at therevolutionmovie.com.
